

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

LATIN-ENGLISH DICTIONARY.

ABRIDGED FROM THE LARGER DICTIONARY

BY WILLIAM SMITH, LL.D.

EDITOR OF THE DICTIONARIES OF GREEK AND ROMAN ANTIQUITIES, BIOGRAPHY, MYTHOLOGY, AND GEOGRAPHY.

LONDON:
JOHN MURRAY, ALBEMARLE STREET.

305. 4. 8.

One of the principal difficulties experienced by school-boys in using a Dictionary is the selection of the particular signification required in each passage, from the frequently numerous meanings assigned to a word. This difficulty to some extent, no doubt, arises from the very nature of the case, and is so far unavoidable; but it is greatly increased by the utter want of arrangement observable in most School Dictionaries, in which all the significations of a word are usually printed together, undistinguished in any way from one another, and placed without regard to any principle either etymological or logical, while nothing, or next to nothing, in the shape of illustrative quotations, is inserted. The pupil naturally therefore assumes that it is a matter of indifference which signification he chooses from the mass so presented to him; and hence, as involving the least trouble, the first is the one usually taken, whether it be right or wrong. Whatever can be done in a Dictionary to counteract this evil has, it will be seen, been attempted in this Work; the various meanings, uses, and constructions of words being carefully and clearly separated, so as to be evident at a mere glance; and thus even the most thoughtless will be prevented from assuming that any meaning may be taken indifferently. It is undeniable, however, that the proper use of a Dictionary is by no means an easy thing; and it is to be regretted that teachers generally take little or no pains to assist their pupils in this respect: a few hours devoted to the explanation and illustration of the proper method of using a Dictionary would be of the greatest possible service to boys, and at the same time yield an abundant reward to the teacher.

With respect to typographical accuracy, it may be stated that the Abridgment was made from the corrected pages of the larger work, on the revision of which unusual pains were bestowed, and it has itself been very carefully read while going through the press; so that it is anticipated that very few typographical errors will be discovered. Great care has also been taken in reference to the quantities, which are accurately marked throughout.

The completeness of this Dictionary consists in its containing all the words found in the writings of the authors whom it professes to explain. In ordinary School Dictionaries no principle appears to have been followed as to the class of words which are admitted or rejected; and thus it frequently happens, even in the best modern works of this kind, as for instance in that of Ingerslev,* that words used by such authors as Gellius and Seneca are inserted, while others employed by Cicero and Virgil are omitted. It is confidently believed that this Dictionary contains every word which a young scholar is likely to meet with in the course of his reading; but it seemed worse than useless to encumber the Work with words, an explanation of which will never be wanted by the persons for whom the book is designed. By omitting such words, not only is the mechanical use of the Work (an important point in a Dictionary) greatly facilitated, but space has been gained for a full explanation of the words inserted, and for the illustration of their meanings and constructions by quotations from the ancient writers. But while this Dictionary is mainly intended to explain the writings of the authors comprised in the first list only, yet it contains many words and meanings of words which do not occur in such authors, but a knowledge of which is necessary for the full understanding of other words and meanings of words which are met with in their works. Hence the names of many authors never read by young students will be found in this book; these are collected in the second list of proper names appended to this Preface.

In preparing this Work, it has constantly been borne in mind that it is intended principally for the use of young scholars; and hence great attention has been paid to the intelligibility and simplicity of all the definitions and explanations. The grammatical portion is taken entire from the larger Dictionary, and the nomenclature adopted throughout is that which is most in accordance with modern philology, and which is both more philosophical and more intelligible than that which still keeps its place in many Grammars.

* The Latin-German School Dictionary of Dr. Ingerslev, which was published at Brunswick in 1853, is perhaps the best work of the kind that has yet appeared in Germany; and every thing of real value which it contains will be found incorporated in the present Work.

The Appendix of Proper Names has been added rather in compliance with custom than because it was considered of much real utility; since the necessary brevity of the notices it contains quite precludes the giving of anything like full or satisfactory information; and in many cases these incomplete statements are liable to suggest erroneous inferences. Still great pains have been taken to state nothing positively incorrect; but the Classical Dictionaries must be consulted by those who require more detailed information. It may be stated that the references in the body of the Work to 'Smith's Antiquities' are to the second edition of the Smaller Dictionary of Antiquities.

In conclusion, the attention of teachers is directed to the facilities which this Dictionary affords for that method of studying the Latin language, which is at once the most philosophical, most interesting, and most expeditious, namely, the etymological or analytical. By placing hyphens between the prefixes and the roots, and by giving the roots separately whenever the process of combination has given rise to any euphonic change, the pupil is here furnished with means which will enable him, if properly assisted, to trace without difficulty the connection of compound and derived words with their roots: he will thus obtain an insight into the constructive principles of the language, the comprehension of which will not only incalculably diminish the labour and lighten the drudgery of mastering its vocabulary, but will also lay the foundation of a knowledge of comparative philology, and, through it, of other branches of science of the highest value.

A, indecl. f. (sc. littera), oftener n. the first letter of the Latin alphabet. At the end of words it is usually short, except in the numerals, trīgintā to nonagintā, and in Abl. of nouns and Imper. of verbs. In compds. a long by nature generally remains unchanged: lābor, delābor; a short in roots is changed into i, and that even where in secondary forms it becomes long by position: fīcīo, effīcīo; frango (from frag), perfrīngo; a in roots long by position is changed into i: scādo, descādo. Sometimes it remains unchanged: pīctura, temptatīo. As an abbreviation A = ante, while Appius is written App. On the voting tablets in the Comitia, A (i. e. Antiquo) denoted the rejection of the proposed law; but in judicial trials A = Absoletio; whence A is called littera salutaris. In dates A. D. = ante dñm (v. ante). A. U. C. = anno ab urbe condita.

Ab, adv. or prep. with Abl. A is used instead of ab before many of the nouns beginning with consonants; but before A as well as before vowels ab is always used. Ab occurs chiefly in compds.; but in old writers ab is, abs quo are met with. In composition, ab remains unchanged before vowels. Before m and v, it becomes a, a-moveo, a-vertō. In the perfect tenses of sum, both ab and a are found; ab-fui, a-fui. Before fero and fugio, ab becomes au, au-fero, au-fugio. Before p, c, g, t, ab, or the shortened form as, is used, as ab-condo, ab-tineo, as-porto.

Ab denotes, 1. The point of departure, the source and origin: 2. Separation or distance: 3. Proximity.

A SPACE. 1. Implying motion from a place or point without reference to the space traversed: me a porta praenestī, he sent me on before from the harbour, Plaut. Hence with verbs of separation or removal, as abducere, mittere, discerere, etc. Panulium a sole, a little out of the sun, Cic. 2. With reference to the space passed over: strengthened with usque (ex or to, all the way through, v. usque): ab imis anguibz usque ad verticem summum, from his low nates even to his very crown, Cic. 3. Without the idea of motion, to designate distance, or separation, with the verbs distare, abesse, and with the particles procul, longe, etc.: non amplius pedum millibus duobus ab castris, Caes. Also to denote the measure of the distance: a millibus passuum quindecim, at a distance of 15 miles, Caes.

IV, Implying proximity: expressed by at, on, in, etc., ab decumana porta, at the main entrance, Caes. So, a tergo, a latere, a fronte, ab occasu, ab oriente; esp. in geog. descriptions: Gallia ab Sequanis et Helvetiis adtingit Rhenum, at the parts occupied by, Caes.

3, TIME, analogous to the relations of space. 1. Without reference to the period subsequently elapsed: After: ab re divina after the sacrifice, Pl.

2. With reference to a subsequent period: From: . . . to: mane ad noctem usque, From morning to night, Pl. ab sole orto in multum diu, from sun-rise till late in the day, Liv.

3. To designate the distance of one point of time from another: From, since, after: centesima lux ab interitu Clodii, since the death of Clodius, Cic. ab urbe condita, since the foundation of Rome.

IV, Denoting proximity, At is ab initio, a primo, a principio, etc. at the beginning, at first.

C, IN OTHER RELATIONS, ab denotes, as in Space and Time (but figuratively), departure from, separation, or distance and proximity: 1. Employed before words representing either the agents, or the causes of effects denoted by verbs. From, by, by means of: a patre laudari; ab aliquo discere, cognoscere, occidere, etc. 2. With names of towns instead of gentile adj., to denote origin: a Cura atque Pometia liberis, Liv. 3. In etymologies: eam rem illi putant a suum cuique tribuendo appellatam, ego a legendo, Cic. 4. To denote the motive, instead of ex, propter, or the simple Abl. cause: From, out of: linguam ab irrita exerecentia, out of derision, Liv. 5. Dolor: laborare, valere ab, instead of the simple Abl.: doleo ab animo, doleo ab oculis, doleo ab aegritudine, Pl. 6. With verbs of expecting, fearing, hoping, etc., ab = a part: hence timere, metuerē ab aliquo, does not mean to fear any one, but, to fear something from him: metui a Chryside, I feared some mischief from her, Ter. 7. Implying the separation of a part from the whole, out of, for ex: scuto ab novissimis uni militi detracto, Caes. 8. The origin, adverbially, a se = sua sponte, of one's own accord, sponte, sponte, Cic. 9. Denoting departure from, or avoidance of. Hence, 1. where beginning and repeating are implied: a summo bibere, to drink in succession down the table: a cauda de ovo exte, tail foremost, Plin. 2. a minimo ad maximum, from the smallest to the greatest, Pl. 3. With verbs of freeing from or protecting against anything: explanandum forum ab illis sceleris vestigiis, Cic. hence, perhaps, ulcisci se ab aliquo, to take vengeance on one, Plin. 4. With verbs of deterring, intermitting, desisting, ceasing: deterere, intermittere, desistere, etc.: ab injuria deterere, Cic. 5. Denoting separation (without the idea of proceeding or departure), analogous (fig.) to A, III, and B, *III, distance in order, rank, mind, or feeling: with secundus, tertius, etc.; with alter, alius, alienus, diversus, etc.: quartus ab Arcesila, the fourth from Arcesilas, Cic. secundus a rege, next in rank to the king, B. Alex. Also in the phrase, non ab re, sc. alienum, not without profit or advantage which, however, is not used by Cicero. 6. Denoting proximity: 1. ad, prep. with acc. for euphony some times written at. Anciently, at, e. g. arceho, arbitro, arcesco (q. v.). So: ar me advenias, Pl.: and in Inscript. arferunt, arvisse. As anth. to ad (as in to ex), ad denotes, first, direction towards an object either without or with motion; then the reaching of or attaining to it; and, finally, the being at or near it.

A In space: 1. Direction towards without motion: to, towards: often of geog. position, with the verbs jacere, vergere, spectare, etc.: Gallia vergit ad septentriones, Caes. 2. Direction towards with motion, and either with or without the idea of arrival, towards, to, against: ad quemvis numerum equitum quamvis pauci adire audent, id. 3. With the idea of arrival: to, even to, with or without uque: usque ad castra hostium accessit, Caes.: quum sudor ad imos manaret talus, Hor. Fig. deverbasse usque ad necem, Ter. Without uque: virgils ad necem caedi, Cic. Hence the whole space traversed is indicated by the words dependent on ad and ad; the former marking the point of departure, the second that of arrival. Ad me, te, etc. = domum meam, tuam, etc.: to oro, ut ad me Vibonem statim venias, Cic. Sometimes domum is expressed: neque domum unquam ad me litteras mittam, id. A proper name is similarly employed: magni domum concursus ad Afranium sebant, to the house of Afranius, Caes. Ad, with the name of a deity in the Gen., is elliptical for ad templum or aedem: ad Opia, Cic. ad Vestia, Hor. With names of towns, ad is used with verbs of motion, instead of the simple Acc. profectus sum ad Capuam, quinque anno post ad Tarentum, Cic. Ad is always used when the name is joined with another subst.: ad Circum oppidum iter constituent, Sall. Both constr. are used by the poets: ad doctas proficisci cogor Athenas, Prop.: doctas jam nunc eat, inquit, Aethenas, Ov.

3. Proximity = apud: near to, by, at, among: sol quasi flagitator aetati usque ad octiduum, stands like a dun continuously at the door, Pl.: ad forum esse, to be at the market, id. Hence, ad laevam or sinistram (ac. manum, partem), adverb. on the left hand, on the left, Ter.: and with an ordinal number: cum plebes ad tertium miliarium consedisset, at the third milestone, Cic. Ad urbem esse, was said of generals who remained outside the gates of Rome until permission was given for a triumph; and also of those appointed to military or provincial commands, just previously to their setting out to enter upon their duties, Cic. Even of persons: among, before = apud: ad iudices sic agi solet, id. Frequently with proper names of places: ad Veia terror multiplex erat, Liv.: especially with the word pugna: pugna ad Trebiam, ad Trasimenum, ad Cannas, etc.

B In time, analogous to the relations to, and in. A 1. Direction towards, i. e. approach to a definite point of time: about, towards: domum redactus ad vespem, about evening, Cic. 2. The limit to which a space of time extends, with or without uque: usque, even to, up to: usque ad hanc aetatem, Pl.: Sophocles ad summum senectutem tragodias fecit, Cic. Hence the whole period is defined by the words dependent on ad, or ab usque, and ad: the former marking its beginning, the latter its end: ab hora fere quarta usque ad solis occasum, Caes.

3. A point of time either past or future: at, on, in, by: ad horam destinatum, at the appointed hour, Cic. C The relations of number.

1. An approximation to a certain sum: near, almost, about (Fr. près de, à peu près, presque, etc.): ad quadraginta eam posse emi minas, Pl.: also sometimes with quasi: quasi ad quadraginta minas, id.: saepe frequentes fulminis omnia ad ducentos, Cic. In the hist. and post-Aug. authors ad is added adverbially in this sense; occidit ad hominum milibus quatuor, Caes. 2. The terminus, the limit: to, even to (rare): aedem Junonis ad partem didimam detegit, even to the half, Liv.: ad assem, to the last farthing, Hor. The phrase ad unum omnes, or simply ad unum, means all together, all without exception: omnes ad unum idem sentium, Cic. 3. An addition: ad Fulviorum Pyrrhus proditorum, tertium transfugis documentum esset, a third example to deserters, in addition to the traitors of Fulvius and of Pyrrhus, Liv.

D In all the manifold relations of one object to another. 1. With verbs which imply a reference to any one, or which denote something done for him: as those of giving, sending, informing, submitting, etc., ad with acc. is frequently used in a sense different from that of the Dat. In connection with the same verbs: litteras ad aliquem = to send or write one a letter; but litteras dare aliqui = to give a letter to one, i. e. into his own hands: ad me ex Aegypto litteras misit, Cic. Hence mittere or scribere librum ad aliquem, to dedicate a book to one: quae institueram, ad te mittam, id. So in titles of books: M. Tullii Ciceronis ad Marcum Brutum Orator, etc. In the titles of odes and epigrams ad aliquem signifies to, addressed to, and in aliquem, against one. But there is often no distinction between a Dat. and ad with an Acc.: ad Q. Fulvium Hirpinum dediderunt sese, Liv. 2. With regard to, in respect of, as to. 1. With verbs: ad omnia alia etate adma rectius, in respect to all other things we grow wiser by age, Ter. 2. With adjectives: where ad = for, of, to: ad rationem solertemque praestantior, Cic.: locum ad egrediendum idoneum, Caes. 3.

With substantives: mentis ad omnia cunctas, Cic. So with the Gerund instead of the Gen. of the same: facultas ad scribendum, id. Applied to persons, ad sometimes = adversus, against: ad senem aliquam fabricam fingit, Ter.

III. The standard or rule to which anything is referred: agreeably to, according to, after: ad iotum normam sapientes, Cic. Ad speciem has several meanings: 1. in the manner of: ad urbium speciem, Suet. 2. for show, display: ad speciem veritatis, Cic.

3. for appearance: pauci ad speciem tabernaculis saluti, Caes. Also where the model or rule is like-wise the cause, according to, in consequence of: ad horum preces, on their entreaty, Liv. IV. To denote, 1. an aim or purpose: haec virtutem ad factiora incendeant, Sall.: this use of ad is very common with the gerund: alere canes ad venandum, Ter. Hence, instead of an adj. to designate a profession: miles ad naves, a marine, Liv.: servi ad remum = remiges = oarsmen, id.: ad lecticum homines, litteratores, chaires, Catull. 2. Fitness or adaptation; to, for: genera herbarum ad morbus bestiarum, etc., Cic. V. To denote comparison (from the idea of proximity or juxtaposition): ad sapientiam huius ille (Thales) nimis nugator fuit, in comparison with this man's wisdom, Pl.

B. Adverbial phrases with ad. I. Ad omnia, withal, to crown all, Liv. II. Ad hoc and ad haec = praeterea, insuper; moreover, besides: ad hoc, quae manus atque lingua perjurio aut sanguine civili alebat, Sall. III. Ad id quod, besides that (very rare), Liv. IV. Ad me, te, rem, etc. concerning me, thee, the matter, etc.: nihil ad me (sc. attinet), that is nothing to me: nihil ad haec, that is not to the purpose, Cic. V. Ad tempus = for a finite, fixed time, Cic.: ad a sit, appropriate time, Caes.: for some, or a short time, Cic.: according to circumstances, id. VI. Ad praesens = for the moment, for a short time, id.: at present, Suet. Tac. Ad praesentiam is similarly used, id. VII. Ad locum, on the spot, Liv. VIII. Ad verbum, word for word, literally, by heart, Cic. IX. Ad summam: on the whole, in general, id.: in a word, in short, id. X. Ad extremum, ad ultimum, ad postremum: at the end, finally: (a) Of place: at the extremity, etc., ad extremum, unde ferrum exstabat, Liv. (B) Of time: at last, Cic. Hence (y) Of order: finally, lastly = denique, id. 2. In Liv., wholly, quite = omnino. XI. Ad unguem, lit. to a nail; hence, exactly, accurately: ad unguem factus homo, a polished man, Hor.

P. Ad is sometimes placed after its substantive: senatus, quos ad soleret, referendum censuit, Cic.

Q. In composition. According to the usual orthography, the d of ad remains unchanged before vowels, and before b, d, h, m, v: adibbo, adduco, adhibeo, admoveto, advenio; it is assimilated to c, f, g, l, n, p, r, s, t: accipio, affligo, aggero, allabor, annuero, appello, attriplo, assumo, attineo; before g and s it sometimes disappears: agnosco, aspicio, asto; and before qu it passes into q: acquiro, acquiesco. II. Signif.: Ad in composition with verbs denotes: 1. motion to: accedere, to step up to. 2. addition: accidere, to be added. 3. nearness: accidere, to sit near. 4. assent, favour: acclamare, to express assent by acclamation, to cheer. 5. near completion: accidere, to cut all but through. 6. at, in consequence of: arrigere, raise (on hearing or seeing anything). In some cases it has the meaning of another, but only when opposed to a at or arg. conj. (the latter ancient form is retained by the poets, and by Cicero in his letters. For the sake of euphony sometimes written ad). At denotes transition of thought, and in most cases adds something, the effect of which is to diminish or destroy the force of what has been admitted: sed is a word of opposition, and at one of addition: at is always at the beginning of a sentence or clause.

I. Mere transition (freq. with a limiting meaning): but, yet: cominus gladiis pugnantur est: at Germani, celeriter phalange facta, impetus gladiorum exceperunt, Caes. Hence at frequently occurs at the beginning of the subdivisions of works, as the books of the Aeneid, Ovid's Metamorphoses, etc., in which cases it serves to indicate a close connection, yet by way of contrast, between the end of the preceding division and the beginning of the new one, e. g.: talibus exemplis montiae nova sacra frequentant, turque dant, sanctaque colunt Iamenes aras (the last two lines of Ov. M.): at non Alcides Minelaea erga cenaset sceleratae dædæ (the commencement of the next book). 2. Esp. in emphatic or impassioned style: concurrit Turnus in ensem et fert. At patet, id. 3. With enim, to state a reason for an objection: but certainly, but consider, but indeed, etc.: at enim nimis hic longo sermone utimur; diem conficimus, Pl. And in questions: at enim cur me potissimum hoc praesidium petiverunt? aut, conj. from alterum (one of two, set both) or: introduces an alternative regarded objectively as a fact: vel, from volo, also implies an alternative, but viewed as still to be chosen, and therefore dependent on the will; that is considered subjectively. Hence in many cases either aut or vel may be used, according to the point of view from which the subject is regarded: e.g. satis esse causae arbitrabatur quare in Dumnorigem aut ipse animadverteret, aut civitatem animadvertere iuberet, Caes. Here Caesar contemplates the alternatives as hypothetical facts: petit ut vel ipse de eo statuatur, vel civitatem statueret iubeat, ib. In this passage the same alternatives are stated, but from a different point of view, viz., as left to the choice of Divitiacus. Aut (or aut . . . aut, for there is no essential distinction between the two cases, since aut may always be understood at the beginning of the former clause) introduces an alternative the acceptance or admission of which implies the rejection or denial of the connected alternative; but whether the co-existence of the alternatives is possible or not is indicated by the context: trunci arborum aut admodum firmis ramis abscissi, frunks of trees, or (if they were not to be had) very stout branches, Caes. || In logical arguments, however, an introduced alternative is inconsistent with another alternative, so that both propositions cannot be true: its most frequent employment in this way is in those arguments called dilemmas: omnia bene sunt ei dicenda, qui hoc se posse profiteri, aut eloquentiae nomen relinquendum est, Cic. 2. In two distinctive phrases: res ipsa et reipublicae tempus aut me ipsum, quod nolim, aut alium quempiam aut invitabit aut dehortabitur, id. 3. In negative clauses for neque . . . neque: ne aut ille alerit, aut usquam ceciderit aut pervergit aliquid, Ter. 4. In interrogations: quaevisit num ille aut ille delensurus esset, Cic. || In a limiting sense, to subjoin something less important: or at least: submersa obire puppes, aut age diversas, Virg.: quæro, num in iuste aut improbe fecerit, or at least unfairly, Cic. || IV. Only in the poets, neque . . . aut sometimes takes the place of neque . . . neque:

neque ego hanc abscondere furto speravi, ne finge, fugam: nec conjugi unquam praetendi iactas, aut haec in fodera veni, Virg. V. The poets connect by aut . . . vel, vel . . . aut, instead of aut . . . aut, or vel . . . vel (in prose writers the two particles are never connected): tellus aut hisce, vel istam, quae facit ut laedar, mutando perde figuram, Ov. VI. In connection with other particles: 1. Aut etiam: quid ergo aut hunc prohibet, aut etiam Xenocratem, Cic. 2. Aut certe: ac video hanc primam Ingressionem meam aut reprehensionem aliquid, aut certe admirationis habitum, id. 3. Aut vero for connecting a more important thought: or indeed, or truly: quem tibi aut hominem, aut verum dum, auxilio futurum putas? id. 4. Aut ne . . . quidem: ego jam aut rem, aut ne spem quidem expecto, id. 5. Aut quidem: Suet. VII. Aut . . . aut = parit . . . parit: partem planitiae aut Jovis templum aut oppidum tenet, Liv. (Cicero Ital. o; Fr. om.)

autem, conj. [v. aut] (never used at the beginning of a clause): again, moreover: unum (iter) angustum et difficile erat: mons autem altissimus impendebat, Caes. 2. It frequently marks a transition with a more or less emphatic contrast: again, on the other hand, but: lego autem libentissime, Cic. || When a word is repeated from a previous clause, in continuing a train of thought: nunc quod agitur, agamus: agitur autem, libere vivamus, an mortem obeamus, id. || 3. = sed, vero, igitur, etc., in resuming a train of thought interrupted by a parenthesis: princeps omnium virtutum illa sapientia, quam σοφία Graeci vocant — (prudētia enim, quam Graeci φρόνησις, aliam quandam intelligimus, quae est rerum expectandarum fugendarumque scientia), illa autem sapientia, quam principem dixi, etc., id. || IV. In connecting a parenthetical clause itself: quae autem non ut recta aut recte facta dicamus, si placet (illi autem appellant κροφύλακα) omnes numeros virtutis continent, id. V. In arguments, to indicate the steps by which the conclusion is reached: aut hoc, aut illud: hoc autem non, igitur illud. Itemque: aut hoc, aut illud: non autem hoc: illud igitur, id. VI. In putting an emphatic question: indeed, forsooth, 7A. Ego non tangeam meam? CH. Tuam autem, furcifer? 7B. forsooth, CH. Te. Exp. where a correction is made: num quis testis Postumum appellavit? testis autem? num accusator? witness did I say? Cic. VII. In the poets, aut autem are connected in interrogations: sed quid ego haec autem nequidquam ingrata resolvō? Virg.

B.

B, b, indoci, n., denotes the soft labial sound between v and p; as a labial it is connected with v, p, f, and w: while as a medial it is the correlative of g and d. It is used in words formed to express certain natural sounds, as in balare, barrire, boare, bombitare, etc. The Romans probably gave the sound p in many cases where they wrote b, especially when the b was final, as in ab, ob, sub, or when these preps. were used in comp., as before c, p, and f, when no assimilation took place in writing. Quintilian says "quum dico divitibus secundam b litteram ratio possit, aves magis audiunt p" so sometimes scribitur is found instead of scriptus. Hence we find variations between b and ps: b seems to have been retained when it belonged to the root of the word, as plebs, urbs; except in the verbal forms plebs, urbs, where p was gen. preferred. Still there are var. cf. debrisus and depsurus, opaciorum and obaciorum: gen., however, the Gr. φ was rendered by ps.

B, B is interchanged with other labials. 1. With v: fervus and fervi; labialis and severn: thus the Latin b is often changed into v in Ital., Fr., and Sp., as labere, acere, avore, etc. So also the MSS. often vary between bis and visit, rene for bone, and so on. Allied to this is the interchange of b with d, as do or duo, as bonus for duonus, bellum for duellum, bis for duis: Sans. duis. 2. With p: naparvos, carbasus; rufoe, buzus; rupos, burgus; Germ. burg: poplicus was afterwards publicus, and Ennius wrote Burrus for Pyrrius. 3. With f: āpho, ambo; bep-avde (later hopde) orbis; so ruco and rufus. 4. With m: sporoe, mortalis: still more freq. b is inserted between m and a liquid, as cumularis; Fr. comblar: numerus; Fr. nombre, etc. || B is interchanged, though rarely, with gutturals: with g, ch, c; Sans. gō, Lat. bo; χολή, Eng. gall, Lat. bilis: Sucura was an older form of Sabura, and cuyo is found for bufo. || In Inscr. B gen. denotes bonus or bene: thus B. C.

C, the third letter of the Latin alphabet, corresponded originally in sound to the Greek Γ. The Duilian inscription gives LECTIONES for legiones; and even to the latest times C. and Cn. stood for Gaius and Gnaeus. But from an early period there was a tendency to give to C the sound of K: in inscriptions Consul is represented by the abbreviation Cos. not Kos; and K was retained as a written symbol only before a, as in KAL for Calendae and Calumnia. However, it seems undoubted that as long as Latin remained uncorrupted, C retained the hard sound of K, even before the vowels i and e. || Interchanges of C with other letters: C and G: vicissimus, tricesimus, etc. rest on better authority than vigesimus, trigesimus, etc.: in It. and Sp. such words as amicus, secundus, are amigo, segundo. With a both C and G form z: dicō, dixi; rego, rexi. 2. c and h: h becomes c in traho, tractus; veho, vectus: as h like c form z: traho, traxi; veho, vixi. 3. c and t: we find Baculi and Bastuli, Vectones and Vittones: cf. nus (root, cut) and Eng. nud. 4. c and r: verra, cogno; Asina, linguo; and vice versa, Avkos, lupus: no columbia and palumba. 5. c interchanges with other labials: with b, see letter B: with v or w: focus, focos; nix, nivis: conniveo, connixi: vivo, vixi; Ducus, Davus. ||. Changes of C in the Romance languages: 1. Of c into ch: cf. Lat. caballus, calidus, camera, canis: with Fr. cheval, chaud, chambre, chien, etc. 2. Of c into s: cf. Lat. facimus, licere, placere, etc.: with Fr. faisons, loisir, plaisir, etc. 3. Of c into g: cf. Lat. acer, macer, etc.: with Fr. aigre, maigre. 4. Omission of c: (i) between two vowels: cf. Lat. focus, locus, nocere, etc.: with Fr. feu, lieu, nuire. (ii) followed by t: cf. Lat. dictus: Fr. dit; pectus: Fr. poitrine. (iii) followed by r: cf. Lat. lacrima, with Fr. larme. ||. As an abbrev. c stands for Gaius or Gnaeus, and reversed, G, for Gaia, Gaia. Upon voting tablets it meant condemno. As a numeral it denotes centum.

D.

D, d, the fourth letter of the Latin alphabet, corresponding, both in sound and in place, to the Greek Delta (Δ). It is the medial dental, being most closely connected with t, the initial dental; and less closely with the medial mutes, b and g. Interchanges of D with other letters. i. D and T. At the end of words t was frequently substituted for d in early times; hence some modern editors write ad for ad, apud for apud, etc. T and D are interchanged also in the derivation of words: e. g. from mentior comes menda, from quattuor quadraginta, etc.

2. Du and B. At the beginning of words, du followed by a vowel has been changed into b: e. g. duellum, bellum; duis, bis; duonus, bonus. In some cases, the d has been dropped, and the vowel with which it was connected slightly modified: e. g. duiginti became viginti; Dianus, Janus.

3. D and R: e. g. auris, audis; ar, ad; apor, apud.

4. D and L: e. g. pando, palom; scando, scala; dacrima, lacrima; Odovorev, Ulices; sedes, sella; mandan, mala.

5. D and S: e. g. podov, rosa; medos, medius; so the Sabine name Cladius became Claudius.

6. In compound words, d at the end of the first portion of the compound is generally assimilated to the initial consonant of the second portion with which it comes in contact: e. g. ac-cedo; af-ficio; ag-gredior; al-ludo; ap-parare; ar-ris; av-videre.

So quid-piam for quid-piam; quid-piam for quid-piam. When in quick cases, d is followed by s and another consonant, it is omitted altogether: e. g. a-scendi, a-stringo. The same thing takes place when d is followed by the nasal gn: e. g. a-gnatus, a-gnaro.

7. In infection d is either omitted before t, or (rarely) assimilated: e. g. cavus for cavod-t; lac-ti, for lacod-t; but ca-t, for caod-t. II. Changes of D in the Romance languages: 1. D into Z, especially d into s: e. g. Lat. ardens, pendulus, It. ardente, penoso; Lat. medius, radius, It. mezzo, razzo.

III. In the oldest period of the language, the ablat. sing. ended in d: MARID, DICTATORE, IN ALTOD MARID, on the Col. Rostr.

2. Several prepositions and other prefixes originally ended in d, which d was afterwards usually dropped: e. g. prod in prode, prod-esse in prod-ire, red-ere; sed in sed-ulo.

IV. As an abbreviation, D usually stands for the praenomen Decimus; also for Deus, Divus, Dominus, Decurio, etc.; in epitaphs. D. M. = Dilectus Manibus.

5. D. The use of the symbol D as the representative of 500 is a modern corruption: the original mark was the half of the original Tuscan numeral 9 or CL = 1000, which printers have found it convenient to represent by D.

daps, prep. with ablat. denotes the departure or removal of an object from a thing to which it was originally attached. Accordingly it occupies a middle place between ex and ab; ex denoting departure or removal from out of the interior of an object, ab departure or removal from the surface of an object. Hence verbs compounded with daps are constructed with ex and ab as well as with de, and verbs compounded with ex and ab are constructed with de, as well as with ex and ab. Etymologically daps is connected with dū: and dū (dir) de, used only in composition, are also of the same origin, the s being added as in ab, ob, sub, etc. [v. ab]: daps from, from, away from, out of, etc.

B. Of time: the point of departure: after (very rare): velim scire hodiene statim de auctione aut quo die venias, Cic. Hence dies de die, from day to day: quum is diem de die differret, Liv. 6. In the phrases de nocte, de vigilia, etc., to denote the period during or in the course of which the action is done: hence it is less definite than the simple abl. which designates the precise time: in comitum Milo de nocte venit, in the night, Cic.: at jugulent homines, surgunt de nocte latrones, Hor. Caes. mittit complures equitum turnas eo de media nocte, about midnight, Caes.: Caes. de tertia vigilia e castris profectus, in the course of the third watch, id. Hence, with abl. instead of the genitive case: ne exiers partis esset de nostris bonis, Ter.: cetera de genere hoc, Lucr. Hence 2. esp. to denote property, de meo, tuo, etc.: obsonat, potat, olet unguenta de meo, Ter.: de suo, Cic. And fig.: ad tua praepocia de meo nihil his novum apposivi, Pl. 3. To designate the material, etc. of which anything is made: of, out of: de eodem oleo et opera exaravi nescio quid ad, Cic.: niveo sacrum de marmore signum, Ov. Hence it sometimes implies transformation: de templo carcerem fieri, Cic.

4. To indicate the person from whom anything is taken, bought, heard, inquired, etc.: de aliquo quaerere, id.: ut sibi liceret dicere id de me, Ter. 5. Of mental operations, moral feelings, etc. 6. To indicate the subject of thought, etc. (the most common meaning): about, concerning, with respect to: de numero dierum fidem servare, Caes.: *de Monysio sum admira*ta, Cic. 7. To denote the cause or reason: for, on account of, because of: de quo nomine ad arbitrum distuli, de eo ad iudicium venisti, id.: qua de causa magno dolore adflictebantur, Caes.: de labore pectus tundi, with pain, Pl. Hence, 8. To designate that in conformity with which any thing is done: according to, after: de suorum propinquo rum sententia atque auctoritate fessae dicatur, Cic.: de more vetusto, Virg.

1. Signif.: 1. donec, away, off: defero, deduco, defluo. 2. It denotes deficiency, or reverse the meaning of the root: sum-^{us}, mis-^{us}, dis-^{us}: decoctio, deficio (un-make), deducere: to acquit: dedecet, in dignitas. 3. ceasing, preventing: dedoleo, degradantur. 4. away, out: deblaturo, declamo. 5. up, in pieces, etc.: desurgo, defuor (see up), delascor. 6. over, over-much, much: deauso, defecio, decanto, delabo, delaboro, deamo. 7. De is often put between an adj. or pron. and its substantive: of this, the foregoing examples furnish instances. It is also frequently put after a simple relative.

Esp. to indicate that from which anything derives its name: from, after, on account of: cui postea Africano cognomen ex virtute fuit, Sall.

|| 5. To indicate transition: from, out of: dil ex hominibus facti, Cic.: nihil est tam miserabile quam ex beato miser, id. || 6. Ex (e) re, ex usu, or ex injuria, etc., to any one's advantage or injury: aliquid facere bene et e re publica, for the good of the state, id.: eam rem non minus ex usu terrae Galliae, quam populi Rom. accidisse, Caes.: ex nullius injuria, Liv.

sions: e.g. ex aequo, ex commodo, ex diverso, ex facili, ex affluenti, ex continenti, ex confesso, ex improvviso, ex inopinato, e regione, etc.: u these words. Ex placed after its noun: terris ex omnia surgunt, Lucr.

|| 9. In composition ex is usually employed only before vowels and the consonants h, c, p, q, s, t; before f, the prefix becomes ef; and before the other consonants the form e is used. A few exceptions to these rules are found: e.g. epoto and epotus as well as excoctio; the forms exfero, exfari, exfodio, are not uncommon in good MSS., and from them (not from exfero, etc.) the assimilated form exproceeds. Moreover, in the compounds of roots beginning with s, the s is often elided: e.g. excidium for excidium (from excindere), and sometimes double forms of such compounds exist: e.g. exul, exul, etc.

|| 2. Signification: a. Primarily and most freq. out of, forth: exeo; and in an upward direction, emineo. Hence also, fig. to imply change, the result being indicated by the root, e.g. effeminare, to change a man's disposition into that of a woman; in other cases ex is privative and equivalent to the English without, or the suffix less: e.g. effrenare, elinguis. b. termination, conclusion: e.g. elugeo: so in the neuter verbs which in composition (esp. after the Aug. per.) become active: e.g. egredior, excedo. Sometimes ex is equivalent to utterly, entirely: e.g. evincere: and hence it comes to have an intensive force equivalent to the superlative suffix: e.g. edurus.

F.

F f, the sixth letter of the Latin alphabet, occupies the same place as the digamma or vau in the Greek alphabet, to which it corresponds in form. F is one of the few aspirated letters in the Latin alphabet, and belongs to the class of labials: hence it corresponds most nearly to the Greek Φ: this is seen from a comparison of such words as fero, fuga, with the Greek φῑρ, φύγι. Subsequently, however, the complex symbol ph was introduced into Latin, and then it became the exclusive representative of the Greek φ, until, in the last period of the language, φ again frequently took the place of ph, and finally, in Italian, entirely supplanted it. || Interchanges of F.

1. With H, the h in Latin corresponding to f in the Sabine dialect: e. g. fedus, haedus; faena, harena (arena); fordem, hordem; vefo, veho etc. 2. With X in Greek: e. g. frenum, χαλινός; fel, χολή; fumis, ο-χνοος.

3. With Θ in Greek: e. g. fera, θηρ; ferreo, φῑρ, θηρ, θηρῑος, etc. 4. With B: e. g. af for ab; siflare for siolare; mfus, ruber; freno, φῑνος; fascine, βασιλει. Also with B in the Teutonic languages: e. g. Lat. frater, frater; Eng. brother, break, franco. In the composition of roots beginning with f the final consonants of the prefixes are assimilated to it: e. g. offero, affero, differo, offero, for ob-fero, ad-fero, dis-fero, ex-fero, etc. || Changes of F in the Romance languages:

1. Into A (cf. II. 1.). This occurs chiefly in Spanish, in which it is very common: e. g. Lat. ferum, alius; Span. hierro, hijo; Lat. fabulari, facere; Span. hablar (Fr. habler), hacer. 2. Into B: e. g. Lat. foccus, It. bioccolo; Lat. forfic, It. forbice.

G.

G g, indecl. n. or (littera subaud.) f. ||. This letter represents the sound of the medial guttural, but was originally included in the Latin alphabet in its place being supplied by C, which, as stated under that letter, had in early times the sound of the Greek γ (for examples vide C.). The pronunciation of G having subsequently undergone a change, a new symbol, slightly differing from it, was introduced about the beginning of the second Punic war.

||. As an initial, g, in pure Latin words, enters into consonantal combination with l and r only: hence in roots which originally began with gn, the g was rejected in the classical period; e. g. gnascor, gnatus, gnomen, became nascor, natus, nomen; but in the compounds the g reappears, e. g.: cognatus, cognomen. |||. Interchanges of G with other letters. As a guttural, g is most closely connected with the other gutturals, c, k, q, j, and h. 1. For the interchanges of c and g, vide C. 2. With s, g combines to form x: e. g. the stem reg- has x. a. rex; so greg-, grex, etc. Similarly in the perfect tenses of verbs, tego, tēxi; rego, rexi. But sometimes the g is elided: e. g. mulgeo, mulsi. IV. Changes of G in the Romance languages. 1. Into j: e. g. Lat. galbānus; Fr. jaune; Port. and Sp. jalde. 2. Into v: e. g. Lat. gyrrus; Fr. river. 3. Into y or i: e. g. Lat. reg-; Sp. reg-; Fr. roi. 4. e. g. Lat. reg- or greg-; e. g. Lat. augustinus: into i. amentarius. 5. G followed by D, into t, n, or d, or omitted: e. g. Lat. smaragdus, amygdala, Magdalena; It.

smaralda, mandola, Maddalena; Fr. émeraude, amande, Madeline. 6. Omission of G: (1) between two vowels: e. g. Lat. regalis, legalis; It. reale, leale; Lat. ligare, Augustus; Fr. lier, aut. (1) At the end of words: e. g. Lat. reg- (reg-); It. re. V. As an abbreviation G denotes Galliarum, Gallica, gemina, Germania, etc.: and sometimes Galus (instead of the usual C).

H

H, is the eighth letter of the Latin alphabet, and the guttural aspirate. It was doubted among the ancients whether H was properly a letter or not. H enters into combination with all the vowels, and generally precedes them; but it was frequently not pronounced: hence harena for arena, haurido for arundo, and even hæc for ec; and on the other hand, aranea for haranea: crus for harus, crucis and crucium for haricis and haricum, aheneus and aheneus, Amthal and Hammthal, Adria and Hadria, etc. || Interchanges of H with other letters. 1. In combination with s it forms s: e. g. traho, trahi; trahi; trahi; trahi; trahi. || The Romance languages display the same uncertainty in the use of H as is manifest in the parent tongue, sometimes retaining it, but far more frequently omitting it: e. g. Lat. hæli, hæli; hæra, hæra; Fr. hæli, hæli; hæra, hæra; Lat. hæli, hæli; Fr. hæli, hæli; Lat. hæli, hæli; Fr. hæli, hæli.
